

The Midwest Regional Rail System is a proposed 3,000-mile high-speed and intercity rail network linking dozens of cities, with Chicago as the hub. The states have been collaborating to conduct planning activities since 1996.

Source: Midwest Regional Rail Initiative